Enough is enough or is way too much ... The disgraced Democrats of New York

The litany is long and sordid, but where do I begin?

Arbitrarily, let's choose 1980 as a starting point for this tale of corruption, abuse of power and depravity. Below is a list of New York state legislators who have been removed from office or resigned for legal or moral issues:

- 1981 Mel Miller (D–Assembly Speaker)
- 2008 Diane Gordon (D–Assembly)
- 2010 Hiram Monserrate (D–Assembly)
- 2012 Vito Lopez (D–Assembly)
- 2014 Eric Stevenson (D–Assembly)
- 2014 William Boyland (D–Assembly)
- 2015 John Sampson (D–Senate)
- 2015 Dean Skelos (R–Senate)
- 2015 Tom Libous (R–Senate)
- 2015 Sheldon Silver (D–Assembly Speaker)
- 2008 Eliot Spitzer (D–Governor)
- 2018 Eric Schneiderman (D–Attorney General)
- 2021 Andrew Cuomo (D–Governor)
- 2022 Brian Benjamin (D–Lt. Governor)

Itemizing the crimes or indiscretions of the miscreants listed above would be a waste of time and space since there is so much more to discuss about the continue attacks on our morality, safety and intelligence. However, if you are interested in learning more about their misdeeds, just Google their names.

You know the attacks:

- the ill-conceived red flag laws,
- the SAFE Act,
- the bump stock ban,
- the ammunition registration debacle,
- the failed coBIS legislation,
- the continued attempt to limit concealed carry,
- day-of-birth abortion,
- the lack of assurances that homeowners or other individuals can defend their family or life from attack, and
- the threat of retaliation if they speak their mind and defend their values.

We also must note:

the forced socialistic curriculum being forced on our children and grandchildren as early as second grade, the abusive taxes, deteriorating infrastructure—the failing bridges, inadequate electric grid, and the denigration of our police departments—while practically eliminating bail, handcuffing the police, failing to enforce laws that would keep violent offenders in prison.

The time has come to throw the Democrats out of office. For the good of your family, town, community and country vote a straight Republican line this November. Take New York state back!

Several people have approached me and asked, “What are you going to do about the SAFE ACT”?

Well, here is your answer: Whatever happens to the SAFE ACT is also dependent on the outcome in NYSRPA v. Bruen.

As the NRA and NYSRPA have said, “this case will have long-term effects on Second Amendment law.”

Currently, the level of scrutiny applied to all Second Amendment cases is classified as intermediate scrutiny. This allows a state to violate civil rights, if it can prove it is for the good and safety of the people. This level of scrutiny was established by precedent many years ago, and it has remained unchanged sense.

The SCOTUS justices have hinted that they are interested in modifying the intermediate scrutiny test to strict scrutiny. What would this change mean?

Open Letter to All New York State Senators

RE: Senate Bill 5058, which would prohibit the use of lead ammunition in the taking of wildlife on state-owned land and on land contributing surface water to the New York City water supply

Dear Senator,

The above-referenced legislation currently has been referred to the Environmental Conservation Committee. Hopefully, with sound advice from the committee and the Department of Environmental Conservation the proposed legislation will be sent back to the legislative body with a recommendation to let the bill die the death it deserves.

While bills such as this may be initially proposed with good intentions, they often are based on spurious or nonexistent data. Here are some particulars you should consider when you review this legislation:

- There is no definitive peer reviewed scientific proof that lead bullets harm the environment.
- According to the EPA, lead shot or bullets in the soil are inert and will not leech into surface water or the water table.
- If this legislation is passed, the cost of lead-free ammunition, which has limited availability, will be excessively high.
- As it stands, only a few liberal anti-hunting states have passed similar laws.
- The millions of rounds of lead ammunition currently in the possession of New York state hunters will become immediately illegal upon passage of this legislation, which will create thousands of new criminals with the stroke of a pen.
- The many million dollars contributed every year by hunters to the Conservation Fund will be reduced as more hunters leave the state or just stop hunting.
- The $23,888,754 yearly Pittman Robertson Act funding also will be in jeopardy as more hunters are chased from the sport.
- Banning lead ammunition will put an end to lucrative out-of-state hunters who visit New York state to hunt.

In summation, let me state that there is no threat to the children of New York state from lead ammunition used during the hunting season. We all know that most of the lead poisoning in children comes from ingesting lead paint—any attempt to suggest that lead ammunition contributes lead poisoning in children is an outright fabrication to scare the people and provide justification for this absurd legislation.

The NYSRPA and its many thousands of members ask that you to vote NO on this horrendous legislation.

Thank you,

According to an article written by David L. Hudson Jr., "Strict scrutiny is the highest form of judicial review that courts use to evaluate the constitutionality of laws, regulations or other governmental policies under legal challenge. As Justice David Souter famously wrote in his dissenting opinion in Alameda Books v. City of Los Angeles (2002): 'Strict scrutiny leaves few survivors.' This means when a court evaluates a law using strict scrutiny, the court will usually strike down the law."<sup>1</sup>

That is, if the right case came along. Hence, the decade-long wait between Heller/MacDonald and our case. If we are successful, there are several Second Amendment cases queued up to apply for certiorari (a writ or order by which a higher court reviews a decision of a lower court) to SCOTUS—including modern hunting-rifle bans.

So, please be patient. There is much in the works and the plan has been successful so far.

A special thank you goes out to the NRA for its help and guidance in NYSRPA v. Bruen. ■

Biden Administration Announces New Firearm Rule

On April 11, the Biden Administration announced the finalization of a new firearm rule, and a new nominee to head the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives. The rule, ATF 2021R-05, is substantially the same as when it was proposed last May.

There has been a fair bit of confusion about what the rule does because it changes a number of core definitions in federal law (including the definition of “firearm”). Here are the basics of what the rule does and does not do:

The rule does:

Effectively ban certain parts, often referred to as “80% receivers,” that assist individuals in making their own firearms. Under the rule, even receivers that clearly cannot yet function as part of a firearm would be treated legally as a “firearm” under federal law.

Change a number of definitions in federal law that will, going forward, affect which part of a new firearm design will be considered the “frame or receiver.”

Require licensed dealers who come into possession of unserialized firearms to place a serial number on the firearm within seven days. Under current law, only licensed importers and manufacturers are required to mark firearms that they import or manufacture.

Require the indefinite retention of firearm transaction records by licensed dealers. Under current law, records can be destroyed after 20 years.

The rule does not:

Require that AR-15 upper receivers are treated as “firearms.” The proposed rule indicated that ATF intended to consider some firearms as having more than one “frame or receiver.” In response to comments from the NRA and others, ATF has abandoned that provision. All existing firearm designs have their current “frame or receiver” classification “grandfathered” under the final rule. Only new firearm designs will be subject to the new “frame or receiver” definitions.

Ban the home manufacture of firearms. ATF admits that they do not have the authority to ban home firearm manufacturing. Firearms made by individuals who are not Federal Firearm Licensees, whether made by additive manufacturing or other means, are still not subject to the marking and recordkeeping requirements of federal law.

When the rule was announced, a copy appeared on the ATF’s website, but it has yet to be posted to the Federal Register. Until it is posted, it is not technically finalized. It will take effect 120 days from the date it is posted in the register.

As the NRA pointed out in comments on the proposed rule, we strongly oppose this bureaucratic power grab by the Biden Administration and think that large portions of the rule are unlawful because they go well beyond the authority that ATF has been granted by statute. NRA intends to pursue all available means to prevent this rule from going into effect or to block its enforcement. ■

Hunting's Positive Impact on the National Economy

by Jim Collins

A report—Economic Impacts of Hunting and Target Shooting—Technical Report—which was released by the Sportsmen's Alliance in December 2021, reveals that recreational hunters and sport shooters contributed $149 billion to the national economy, supported nearly 970,000 jobs, and created over $45 billion in wages and income in 2020.

The group touts the fact that for the first-time, economic analysis has been done regarding how America's hunters and sport shooters contribute to national and state economies.

"This economic impact study makes it easy for sportsmen to educate friends, family and legislators on the importance of hunters and sport shooters to our national, state and local economies, as well as conservation funding at the state and federal level," said Evan Heusinkveld, president and CEO of Sportsmen's Alliance.

The survey, which was produced for Southwick Associates, was funded by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Multi-State Conservation Grant Program. Key survey highlights include:

- Deer hunters spent more than $23 billion, producing $2.5 billion in federal taxes.
- Nearly 20 million sport shooters spent more than 398 million days shooting in 2020.
- New York state, which has 865,000 hunters, produced $265 million in state and local taxes and $2 billion in gross domestic product.

- The report contains the economic impact of hunters and sport shooters at the national, state and local level.
- Additionally, contributions to the GDP and state, local and federal taxes paid are available at the district, state and national level, as well as by popular hunting and firearm types.

"If hunting and shooting were a company, the jobs it supports would place it as the third largest private-sector employer, and $65 billion, the retail sales it generates, would place it at fifty-second on the Fortune 500 list," said Heusinkveld.

This report—which can be viewed at sportsmensalliance.org—highlights the positive economic impact that those who enjoy gun sports have on the local, state and national economy. Hunters, target shooters and collectors and sport shooters are part of the fabric of our nation. It is part of what makes America free and unique and I love it!

As always, may God watch over and protect the brave men and women protecting us, at war, in our Patriot Armed Forces and may God bless America! ■

'Jackie, You Cost Me Money!'

by Jackie Emslie

Recently, I held yet another Women on Target Instructional Shooting Clinic at SafeShoot Indoor Shooting Sports Complex in Kingston, N.Y. The following day, I coordinated a shooting event at Dutchess County Pistol Association for 31 youth and parents from Westchester County, followed by range time for the Dutchess County Chapter of The Well Armed Woman.

While we were packing up, a Dutchess County Pistol Association member approached me and said, "Jackie, you cost me money!" Beg pardon? Then, he broke out in a huge grin and told me that his wife had attended the Women on Target clinic. He also mentioned that she bought a three-month range membership that day, and she had her eye on a gun that she liked. I reminded him that Mother's Day was coming up, and that I was sure she would just love a gift card!

It is not the first time I've had this kind of conversation. Over the years, I've had several calls and emails from husbands, fathers, uncles, brothers, nephews and even sons, expressing similar sentiments. My favorite conversation of all time was when a husband called me up the day after a Women on Target clinic (several years ago) and said, "What did you do to my wife?" Again, beg pardon?

Then, he told me that his wife was very much afraid when he dropped her off at the range in the morning. However, during the day, she found her inner gun goddess that she never knew she had. When he picked her up after the course in the afternoon, she proceeded to order him to take her to the gun store. And, she marched in with a shopping list I had distributed in class. Filled with newly minted confidence, she spoke with the gun dealer and explained what kind of .22 rifle she wanted. The gun dealer smiled and said, “Um ... Ma’am ... Are you coming from one of Jackie’s clinics?” She said as-a-matter-of-fact she was, and they both had a good chuckle. The hubby was watching all of this unfold with a mixture of wonderment and delight. To his credit, the shop owner stayed open late that day to make sure she was able to pick a rifle that was right for her. In the meantime, she sent her husband around the store to get hearing protection, eye protection, a range bag, a cleaning kit, targets, a rifle case, and 500 rounds. She looked at the brick of ammunition and told him to get another brick because 500 rounds simply wasn’t enough. By this time, he was just grinning from ear to ear.

When she went to pull out her credit card to pay for her new treasures, her husband put his hand gently on hers and said, “No, honey, I totally got this for you. I’ve been waiting for this day all the years we’ve been together.”

Now that’s love! So, as he was relating this story to me, I could tell his voice was getting thick with emotion, filled with happiness and unending gratitude for providing this educational opportunity for his beloved wife.

During these clinics, the team and I can share our talents to provide a safe, fun and welcoming event where women can come and learn about safe and responsible firearms ownership. We provide information and a great experience, and then they make their own decisions whether to become gun owners—and if they do, they determine the degree they wish to go on their journey.

Even if she decides not to get involved with guns, she is making her own decision based on her own experience and not on what some commentator on TV or social media tells her what to do or how to think. That to me is still a victory.

Every day, gun safety courses are held throughout America at which lives, attitudes and perceptions are changed forever. I do hope that those of you who are instructors fully understand the influence that you have with your students. The impact of what you say, what you do, and the experiences you carefully create all leave a lasting impression. ■

NRA Women: American History is Filled with Armed Women Standing Up for Freedom

by Marion Hammer

In 1996, after being elected the first woman president of the National Rifle Association, I was invited by then-Arizona Gov. Fife Symington (R) to give a speech to the Arizona Governor's Commission on Non-Traditional Employment for Women.

Gov. Symington expressed the thought that as the first woman president of the NRA, I might inspire women to seek "non-traditional" employment positions for women, for which—he believed—many are well qualified.

As a lover of history, I knew that women had long earned their place in history, although the recorders of history have ignored many accomplishments of women. Too many have also downplayed the ability of women to do many jobs they haven't traditionally been given credit for.

Many history books, for example, tell us that Paul Revere was a Revolutionary War hero. We're all familiar with "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere." He mounted his horse and rode from Boston to Lexington to warn the countryside that the British were on the march. He is probably the most-recognized figure of the Revolutionary War because of his well-publicized ride that was mythologized by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem "Paul Revere's Ride."

However, Sybil Ludington, another American Revolutionary War figure, also made a not-as-famous ride. She mounted her horse and rode through the countryside to spread the alarm that the British were attacking Danbury, Conn., where much of the region's munitions and supplies were stockpiled. Nevertheless, history and textbooks barely mention Sybil Ludington.

Few remember that Paul Revere never finished his ride or his mission. He was captured by the British before he finished the job. History records him as a hero. Sybil Ludington, on the other hand, finished her job. Ignoring the danger of British patrols and spies, she galloped off through the dark night—over as many as 40 miles of dirt roads—to spread the alarm to the countryside and returned home safely. Nevertheless, history barely recognizes her heroics.

Paul Revere and Sybil Ludington lived at a time in our history when Americans were giving birth to a new nation. It was a time when we were laying the foundation for America's traditions; it was a time when men and women alike did what they could to win their freedom. They were trying to break from the tyranny and oppressive practices of King George III. It was a time when many men and women alike were patriots, and gave a full measure to any task in the fight for freedom. Women and men formed a partnership in fighting the Red Coats and in carving out a new nation. Both men and women, after all, have an equal stake in preserving their freedom.

When it comes to reading history textbooks, I find myself looking around for the rest of the story, because chances are, if you look long enough and do enough research, you'll find there's more to the story; in fact, it can be quite different from the official narrative.

In 1776, for example, Margaret Corbin, from Pennsylvania, took the post of cannoneer in the American Revolution. After the war, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court voted for her to receive disability pay for life and gave her a clothing allowance. On that basis, one could argue that having women in the military is an American tradition dating back to 1776.

Betsy Ross is widely reported to have made the first American flag. I'm sure you've all seen artists' drawings of Betsy Ross sitting with a group of women, portrayed as a ladies sewing circle, sewing the flag. But is it an accurate portrayal of history? Betsy Ross' husband owned an upholstery shop. When he died, Betsy took over the business. She was a single, female business owner when George Washington was reputed to have commissioned her to make the flag—not a member of a ladies' sewing circle. It was her job, not her hobby.

Did artists and the recorders of history find it more politically correct to portray Betsy Ross as a homemaker sitting at home—with the home fires burning—hosting a sewing circle of neighbors rather than a business woman hired to do the job?

From the first colonists to the pioneers who settled the frontier, both men and women did what was needed—it was a matter of survival.

During World War II, men went off to foreign shores to fight for freedom and most of the women stayed home. But did the women who stayed home hang around the house watching the children, eating chocolates and listening to soap operas on the radio? Some may have. But in overwhelming numbers, women stepped right into the jobs vacated by their husbands, fathers, brothers and boyfriends. Could they do the work? Of course they could, and they did an outstanding job!

Throughout our history, women have always done jobs that are thought to be “non-traditional” for women to do; still, women have not been widely recognized in recorded history for this. For example, the first women’s national labor organization was formed in 1869. If you want to look at “glass-ceiling” breakers in non-traditional employment, it might surprise you to know that the first recorded woman postmaster was in 1775—that’s postmaster, not postmistress. In 1834, women organized in Lowell, Mass.—when women couldn’t even vote—and created the first union of working women in American history.

In 1849, Elizabeth Blackwell became the first woman to receive a medical degree in the United States. In 1869, Arabella Mansfield became the first female lawyer in the United States. In 1932, Amelia Earhart became the first woman—and the second person after Charles Lindbergh—to fly nonstop and solo across the Atlantic Ocean. The point is: Women, regardless of race, religion, political persuasion or political correctness can be anything they want to be and can do anything they set their minds to.

But, even today, women still have to overcome some stereotypes. We still have to take the initiative and have the courage to seize the moment. We can’t wait around for somebody to offer opportunities to us.

Clearly, to succeed in the marketplace, you must have ambition, confidence and perseverance. You must be willing to work hard, prove yourself and sacrifice to “go for the gold.”

In 1996, Kim Rhode, who was 17 years old at the time, won the Olympic gold medal in shotgun for the United States. Do you think she achieved her dream because her competition caved in? Of course not! She worked hard for that victory and earned the gold. That’s the American way. Or at least it’s supposed to be. Kim Rhode’s win in 1996 was the beginning. She is now a six-time Olympic medal winner.

Traditional and non-traditional roles are a matter of perception. And although some say perception is reality, often perception is not real, but is merely a figment of someone’s imagination or prejudice.

I would define a non-traditional job for a woman merely as a position that no woman has wanted badly enough, and has been willing to work hard enough to break through that invisible barrier that some people call “tradition” to get. So, let’s not confuse qualifications with the equality issue. Being given the same opportunity to compete for a job is equality. Having to meet the same physical requirements to actually do the job is a qualification issue.

Many corporations throughout America have learned that women make excellent managers and executives. Women are accustomed to making decisions and managing a group of people with diverse personalities, ages, responsibilities and needs. They delegate responsibility, coordinate schedules, arrange transportation, manage budgets, deal with tax regulations, manage purchasing, formulate dress codes, monitor and arrange for maintenance and coordinate communications. They manage health care, education, nutrition, food service, vacation, insurance, retirement, recreation and entertainment planning. Every day, they get dressed, brush their hair, put on their make-up and go to work.

When my father was killed in World War II, we were living in tough times for single-parent families. Day care, as we know it today, didn’t exist. So, I grew up on a farm in rural South Carolina with my fraternal grandparents. I worked side-by-side with my grandfather in the fields and around the farm and side by side with my grandmother around the house.

Some might say that my grandparents had traditional roles, but it looked to me like they just decided who would do what. I was never told “you can’t do that because you’re a girl” or “only boys do that.” My job was to do what needed to be done and there were very few things I couldn’t do. I think my job was pretty traditional for a youngster—I had to do everything I was told to do and that was a little bit of everything.

But I do remember getting upset when my grandfather would pick up his rifle and go hunting without me. He told me I couldn't go because I didn't know how to shoot or how to hunt. That was a qualification issue. I was smart enough not to beg him to let me go anyhow; instead, I begged him to teach me what I needed to know to be able to go hunting. And he did. My grandfather taught me to shoot and hunt when I was six years old.

It wasn't long before I was a good shot and pretty sharp at hunting. Then one day he didn't say "go get the rifle and let's go hunting." Instead, he said, "Go get the rifle and get us a couple of rabbits for dinner." Like women before me and women to follow, when I had proved I could do the job, I got it.

I was taught skills, self-reliance, confidence, perseverance, teamwork, responsibility, honesty and discipline—those core values are something all successful men and women share. My grandfather taught me to stand up and fight for my beliefs and my goals. He taught me that I could do anything I wanted to do and be whatever I wanted to be. And he constantly encouraged me to work hard and live up to my potential. He also cautioned me never to compromise my goals, my dreams or my principles.

He told me I would never truly succeed if I tried to please too many people. He said a person of principle will never compromise and admonished me to remember that "there is nothing in the middle of the road but a yellow stripe and dead possums."

I was lucky: my grandparents believed in me and my abilities—and they taught me to believe in myself. Some women lack that confidence, but so do some men.

Unfortunately, in today's politically correct America, I see fewer young women learning the skills and values taught by my grandparents. It seems that too many women, and young men as well, fail to understand or value a successful work ethic or to embrace self-reliance. Hard work is the only true path to achievement and success. Shortcuts tend to be short-lived.

Throughout the years, our economy has degenerated to the point where most families can't survive on one income. The U.S. Department of Labor estimates that today, over 70% of mothers with children under 18 are working or seeking employment. For them, the traditional role of stay-at-home mothers is a myth. It has been so long since the average family could get by on one income that I don't think you can call a stay-at-home mom traditional anymore.

The economy, driven by tax-and-spend big government, has forced women out of the home and into the workplace to help support their families. Most women no longer have a choice. It's a matter of day-to-day survival.

In 1970, approximately 38% of women were in the workforce, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Significantly, women make up nearly 50% of the workforce today. Many are well qualified for better jobs with better pay than they currently hold.

Still, a troubling development today is that not only have women been short-changed in history, but now freedom is taking a hit. Have you realized that many of today's textbooks barely mention the U.S. Constitution and its first 10 Amendments, known as the U.S. Bill of Rights? Even more have completely omitted any mention of the Second Amendment.

The Second Amendment is your guarantee of your right to keep and bear arms. A guaranteed right without which we could never have fought the Revolutionary War, won our freedom and formed an independent nation. A guaranteed right without which big government can take away all your freedom.

If you don't believe that's possible, all you have to do is look at Cuba. When Fidel Castro came to power, the first thing he did was to take guns away from Cuba's citizens. Then he took their wealth, their property, their freedom and their dignity, and left the people with nothing. They became a nation in shambles with a desperate and demoralized people—and it happened in a few short years. Cuba's citizens probably didn't think it was possible either.

The National Rifle Association is an organization steeped in history and tradition and strong in the defense of the U.S. Bill of Rights. Women serve a major role in protecting the Second Amendment.

Take Back Congress

by Carl Gottstein

It's an election year, and there are several pro-Second Amendment candidates who are running for re-election: Elise Stefanik and Claudia Tenney for the 21st and 22nd congressional districts, respectively. And, two newcomers Liz Joy and Marc Molinaro who have tossed their hats in the ring for the 20th and 19th congressional districts, respectfully.

Do you want to know more about these candidates? Read their biographies below.

Liz Joy

Joy grew up in the gorgeous foothills of the Adirondack Mountains in Upstate New York. While attending college, she met the love of her life, and now husband of 32 years. She is the proud mother of four adult children and a grandmother.

It was while her husband was active-duty Medical Corps that Joy began to fully appreciate the magnitude of freedoms we have in this great country called America. As she and her family moved from military base to military base, she witnessed first-hand the sacrifices military men and women endured to maintain these freedoms on a daily basis. They selflessly gave and sacrificed with unparalleled patriotism for a land they proudly defended and protected.

Since that time, she has actively spoken and written about the importance of fighting for our constitutional freedoms and amendments. Joy has also worked on campaigns and done whatever she could to help strong candidates get into public office.

Aside from writing and speaking, Joy enjoys spending time with her family and day hiking in the beautiful mountains whenever possible. She believes that New York is a gorgeous state, that is worth fighting for.

Elise Stefanik

Stefanik proudly represents New York's 21st District in the House of Representatives and serves as the House Republican Conference Chair. She is currently serving her fourth term in office. In 2014, she was the youngest woman ever elected to Congress in United States history, and she currently serves as the youngest Republican woman ever elected to Congress.

Stefanik was a member of President Trump's impeachment defense team during the Senate's first impeachment trial, and she served as a New York co-chair of President Donald Trump's 2020 re-election campaign.

She is a member of the Armed Services Committee, the Committee on Education and Labor, and the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. On the Armed Services Committee, she serves as the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Cyber, Innovative Technologies, and Information Systems. On the Committee on Education and Labor, she serves on the subcommittees on Higher Education and Workforce Development and Civil Rights and Human Services.

Stefanik has proudly taken the oath of office to uphold the Constitution in her four terms representing New York's 21st congressional district. She is a strong Second Amendment supporter, and she has earned an A+ rating—the highest rating in New York state—by the NRA for her commitment to upholding the Constitution. She worked to pass the Concealed-Carry Reciprocity Act out of the House of Representatives.

Her support of the Second Amendment includes:

- A+ rating by the NRA, the highest rating for any member of Congress from New York
- Led the fight against New York's unconstitutional SAFE Act—including introducing the Second Amendment Guarantee Act, legislation that would override the SAFE Act.
- Joined colleagues in submitting an amicus brief requesting the U.S. Supreme Court grant certiorari in Worman v. Healey, which would provide the precedent to challenge the New York SAFE Act in the U.S. Supreme Court.
- Worked to pass the Concealed-Carry Reciprocity Act out of the House of Representatives.
- Joined colleagues in introducing a Congressional Review Act Joint Resolution of Disapproval, which would prohibit the Department of Justice from implementing the Biden Administration's proposed ghost gun rule.

Claudia Tenney

Tenney was first elected to serve as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives in 2016—

Elise Stefanik

after winning one of the most expensive races in the nation. She won her second term in yet again among the most expensive and competitive congressional races in the country, winning by 109 votes after an over three-month ballot canvassing process.

Prior to her election to Congress, Tenney served as a member of the New York State Assembly, where she led the charge to hold Gov. Cuomo accountable. Prior to joining public service, she was an accomplished attorney and longtime small-business owner. She was the co-owner and legal counsel to Mid-York Press Inc., a commercial printing, and manufacturing firm started by her grandfather in 1946.

Tenney is the daughter of the late Honorable John R. Tenney, who served as a Justice of the Supreme Court of New York in the Fifth Judicial District from 1969 through 2003, and the mother of U.S. Naval Academy graduate Trey Cleary, who serves as a captain in the U.S. Marine Corps.

Marc Molinaro

Molinaro was elected as Dutchess County’s 7th County Executive in November 2011. At 36, he took office as the youngest county executive in county history. He was re-elected for a third term in 2019.

Molinaro was first elected to public office at the age of 18 in 1994, serving on the Village of Tivoli Board of Trustees. In 1995, he became the youngest mayor in the United States. In 2006, he brought his passion for public service to Albany when elected to represent the 103rd District in the New York State Assembly.

In 2018, he ran for governor against Andrew Cuomo, receiving 2.2 million votes—more than any Republican candidate since George Pataki in 2002. He called out Cuomo on his corruption, mishandling of state policies, and cover up of sexual assault and harassment.

In 2019, he won re-election with 60% of the vote, having been challenged by a former Cuomo administration employee with all the financial and political backing of the governor. Statewide Democrats put in a lot of energy in ending Molinaro’s political career and he beat them back handedly.

In 2022 Molinaro is challenging two-term incumbent Antonio Delgado in the state’s 19th congressional district. Based on 2018 results—the worst year for Republicans in 40 years—Molinaro won this district by 3%, despite being outspent by over $25 million.

Over the past 10 years, he has cut Dutchess County taxes every year, reduced spending and the size of the county workforce, balanced the county finances—all while maintaining quality services. During the same period, he worked with law enforcement on major criminal justice reforms that have reduced violent crime 50% (until bail reforms out of Albany).

He lives in Red Hook with his wife, Corinne, and his children Abigail, Jack, Eli and Theo. ■

In 1996, a lot of attention was drawn to the fact that I was the first woman president of the NRA in the organization's then-125-year history. That attention shows how little the mainstream media knows about the real NRA and the role of women in our proud history.

From our board of directors to our five-million members, we are an organization of dedicated volunteers. Throughout our history, the NRA has always been a family organization. Women have been trained to shoot safely and, in turn, teach others to shoot. They have been shooting competitively and actively involved in our education and safety programs for men, women and youngsters.

The first woman elected to the NRA board of directors was Alice Bull in 1948. Since that time there have been, and continue to be, many women who serve on the NRA board of directors. I was elected NRA president in 1996. Since that time, two more women have served as NRA president.

Many women have joined me in service to our cause. Women have chaired many of the NRA's major committees, including the Bylaws Committee, Competition Committees, Ethics Committee, Legal Affairs Committee, Membership Committee and Scholarship Committee, and have vice-chaired the Hearings Committee and Legislative Policy Committee. Women serve as trustees of our Firearms Civil Rights Legal Defense Board, the NRA Foundation Board and our Whittington Center Board, a board that governs our shooting facility in New Mexico.

In short, women are not figureheads in the NRA. We are active players and successful decision makers at all levels and in more substantial numbers than most people recognize.

Long before it became fashionable or politically correct to hire women in key positions, the NRA was benefiting from the knowledge, ability and expertise that women brought to the organization.

For 150 years, women have been an active part of the NRA. It really doesn't matter if you're a man or a woman. If you love America, cherish freedom, own a firearm, or care about your right to own a firearm, the NRA works for you day in and day out. I guess you could call that a tradition. ■

NYSRPA needs you!

There is no doubt that Hochul, Bloomberg, DeBlasio and liberal Anti-Second Amendment people are trying to destroy the NRA and NYSRPA. We are certain that you're aware of what legal costs are in today's economy. We are fighting hard against their cause.

Here is the bottom line: DIG DEEP.

Contribute to keeping the state of New York free, free from Hochul's idea of utopia, free from DeBlasio's socialist mentality; free to protect one's self, home and family.

Freedom is NOT free. It always costs dearly. Remember that.

Get out there and vote

Why is the Second Amendment important? It gives citizens the right to protect themselves, without the restrictions of the government. The Second Amendment allows us to protect ourselves and our families from foreign and domestic attacks if our government won't. Let me ask you: How is the government helping you right now?

We need more gun owners to step up to the plate and vote. I hear a lot of people saying, "What can we do about it?" "My vote doesn't count," "It's all fixed anyway."

If we all thought this way, the Second Amendment would have been diminished years ago. As gun owners we need to do our homework, make a choice, and get out there and vote!

Let our friends know why this is so important to have representatives who are pro-Second Amendment in Congress. Please investigate the four candidates we outlined in this issue of the Bullet. I believe they are what we need here in New York—and I think if you investigate what they have to offer you will too!

The four candidates

Republican Liz Joy is a Christian mother of four. She is a Second Amendment advocate who received a "A-Q" rating from the NRA. She also happens to be on the board of NYSRPA! As a victim of a brutal attack Joy, is committed to fighting the Bail Reform Act.

House Republican Elise Stefanik is a pro-Second Amendment advocate with a "A+" rating from the NRA. She believes that upholding the right to bear arms shall not be infringed upon. Stefanik also supports bipartisan legislation to improve the public education system.

Republican Claudia Tenney is another great candidate who believes that the right to keep and bear arms is sacred. Tenney is firmly committed to working with her colleagues to protect future generations. She received an "A" rating from the NRA. Tenney also was the first legislator to introduce a bill to fully repeal disgraced former Gov. Cuomo's SAFE Act.

Republican Marc Molinaro has opposed the SAFE Act, arguing it infringes on gun owners' civil liberties.

Molinaro has an "A" rating from NRA.

Final thoughts

I want to thank all of you who voted for Tom King in the NRA board of elections!

It was great seeing you all at the gun shows in Syracuse and Long Island!

After two years of staying indoors and not enjoying each other we are now back together and feeling a bit normal.

All clubs that are members and want to be listed in Bullet please email info@nysrpa.org so that we can assure your listing is added. Thank you! ■
